SPARTACIST PLOT AT WEIMAR LEADS TO STREET BATTLE

Desperate Attempt Aimed At Government Checked By Soldiery

PRISONERS FREED

Troops Join Radicals In Onslaught On Ministers' Quarters

MOB IS MENACING

French Threaten To Bomb Frankfort Due To Action Of Crowd

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Copenhagen, June 18.—A telegram dated the 18th from Berlin states that the Spartacists attempted a coup d'etat at Weimar last night. Two uniformed men at 2 o'clock in the morning went to the military prison and released 60 prisoners, who persuaded the soldiers at the barracks to join the Spartacists. The soldiers overpowered the sentries at the Castle, where the Ministers are quartered, but Government reinforcements defeated the Spartacists after violent street fighting and made prisoners of some of their leaders.

Seeks To Minimise Affair

Berlin, June 18.—A semi-official account of the above incident minimises the affair and makes no mention of Spartacists or of soldiers joining them. It says that two soldiers and four prisoners were wounded.

Situation Was Critical

Berlin, June 18.—Further details disclose that during the attempted coup at Weimar the situation was critical as for a time the members of the Government were unprotected owing to the troops having been entrained for Erfurt to quell a local insurrection there.

The military guard of the Castle, however, in the nick of time, closed the iron doors and prevented the insurgents entering the Castle. Order was restored in two to three hours.

German Mob In Frankfurt Menaces Allied Officers

Copenhagen, June 18.—A telegram sent today says that huge crowds in Frankfurt demonstrated before the hotel occupied by Allied officers. A shot was fired, whereupon German Government troops opened fire with machine-guns on the crowd which fled.

Subsequently a German insulted a French officer, who was forced to take refuge in a building where French navy men were quartered. A crowd surrounded the building. The French authorities warned the police president that they would bombard the town if French officers were molested. A strong force of Government troops then dispersed the crowd.

S.S. Nanking Takes Home Thousand Czech Invalids By Way Of United States

Moving Scene As Ship Leaves Vladivostok With Veterans Of Five Years' Agony Suffered In Fighting In Siberia

Vladivostok, June 16.—The sailing of the steamship Nanking from Vladivostok harbor yesterday, laden down with Czecho-Slovak invalids to be transported home by the American Red Cross was a sight as impressive as it was pathetic. Over a thousand Czechs, worn to the point of death from five years of fighting, imprisonment and sickness, had been brought out the day before in barges and sampans.

They came wearing their shabby old uniforms and burdened with shabbier little bundles of belongings, filing on to the splendid ship which had been procured for them by the Red Cross, too full of joy for utterance. Some carried their own blankets and tin cups strapped on to their backs. Others haunted ever by the memory of the past years of hunger and privation, carried little paper parcels of black bread and crusts—carried this stay against starvation on to that big ship laden down with good things for the invalids. It is doubtful if any one of them could have been separated from that little parcel of bread, though the first night's meal which consisted of soup, beef steak and onions, potatoes, carrots and apple pie, should have served to relieve any anxiety for the future.

Majority Mere Boys

The majority of these men were young—mere boys with thin bodies and tired eyes, eyes that had looked on more suffering and misery—bodies that had endured more hardship and agony in the past few years than it is given to the ordinary person to look upon and endure in a lifetime. All were suffering from the results of wounds, sickness and exposure. Many were without feet and hands, frozen in a night's duty on the front, or perhaps when they lay wounded in the snow with the thermometer at fifty below zero. It is one of the horrors of Siberian fighting that a man who falls wounded to the ground freezes to death before help can be brought to him.

There was a young man with haunted blue eyes who had been a prisoner in South Russia. Once he had been forced to stand and watch while the Bolshevists killed five men, cut their bodies into bits and threw them into a cesspool. He and other Czechs had been compelled to work in an iron foundry. In the evenings often they would be waylaid by the Bolshevists and beaten until almost unconscious, whereupon their little store of money would be taken from them. Nevertheless, they were glad to go on working—glad to have something to keep them from losing their minds.

Tragic Plight Of Young Girl

Accompanying the Czech invalids was a little Czech "sister" or nurse—just a young girl—who had been rescued from the Bolshevists when the Czech army took Ekaterinburg. Just a young girl—a prisoner for three months—and when her countrymen found her she was a raving maniac. Careful nursing and everything that love and money could do gradually restored the frenzied brain to normal, but even now Sister Anna is a nervous, twitching, frightened girl who cannot bear to sit still, or bear loud noises, or be touched or talked to.

When the Nanking hoisted anchor and set sail for America—the first lap on the long journey back to Czecho-Slovakia—it was five o'clock in the morning, with a bleak, Siberian sun just rising over the horizon. Every man who was able to be out of bed had gathered on deck to watch the sailing. Standing on the after deck, half laughing, half crying they sang their beautiful Czech anthem "Ode Domov Jsi" (Where is My Home) and bade farewell to Russia. A small boat of Red Cross workers who had paddled out to see them sail was cheered to the high heaven, and no one could doubt the gratitude and deep appreciation felt by that tired band of invalids for the American Red Cross which was taking them from this dark land of sorrows back to their own sunny homeland.

COUNCIL AGAIN PROPOSES TO LICENSE LOCAL PRESS

Inserts Provision Into New By-Laws As Amended By Consular Body

A provision to license the press of the Settlement and bring it under direct control of the Municipal authorities has once more been injected by the Municipal Council into the list of new by-laws which will be submitted for approval to a special meeting of the ratepayers.

The proposed amendment, which places the press in the same category as brothels, saloons and ricshas, sandwiching it in for convenience between "pens for goats" and "shops, stores, stalls," etc., is added by the Council to the by-laws as amended by the Consular Body, the latter having omitted the press from the section dealing with "licensed occupations."

The amended by-laws, printed in this week's Municipal Gazette, deals with building operations, licensed occupations, dangerous materials, traffic regulations and the carrying of arms. The by-laws were passed by the ratepayers, with certain amendments, at a special meeting on March 21, 1917, but were not approved by the Consular Body.

The Council, in connection with the press provision, states:

The omission to provide for the licensing of the press and of printing establishments, etc., must be considered serious. That the Council should be vested with every power necessary to the preservation of peace and good order within the Settlement was amply demonstrated in the recent student unrest, which ultimately extended to the merchant and laboring classes of the Chinese community. In particular, it is essential that the Council should have full power of immediate action, without recourse to any other authority, to prevent the publication of any printed matter of a character calculated to incite to a breach of the peace. Accordingly the Council will submit the Consular body's text of by-laws for the ratepayers' approval, with the following words inserted in by-law XXXIV between the words "goats" and "or sell" viz.: "or carry on the business of a printer, lithographer or engraver or print or publish any newspaper or periodical."

BRITAIN MAKES REPLY TO IRISH-AMERICANS

Virulent Charges Concerning Irish Government Are Denied Officially

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 18.—The report of the Irish-Americans Walsh and Dunne, which contains a series of most virulent charges against the Irish Government, police, prison warders and military has enjoyed a full week's free run in America, where it has caused a great sensation and provoked much bitterness against the British.

An official rejoinder issued last night, an essentially dispassionate document, places each charge and the reply in parallel columns.

Nature Of Reply

The replies mainly consist of a declaration that this is wholly untrue or absolutely baseless, with explanations disproving the allegations. A certain warmth of language is displayed in one case only, where the charge is described as a deliberate, wicked falsehood. This related to allegations, concerning "A British unprovoked assault by an English Colonel and a crowd of soldiers on Professor McNeill."

The rejoinder cites effectively the speech of Mr. John Redmond in 1915 testifying to the prosperity and happiness of Ireland and the report of Mr. Justice Dodd, of the Irish High Court of Justice, disposing of the charges of bad treatment of Sinn Feiners in Belfast prison in June, 1918.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed in industrial circles at the agreement as it is felt it will inevitably lead to a formation of a recognised center for the settlement of all trade disputes.

PARIS IS JOYOUS OVER NEWS TREATY IS TO BE SIGNED

'Waited Forty-Nine Years For This Minute,' Says Clemenceau

DELEGATES BACK

Signature Probably Will Take Place Thursday Or Friday

SEES HARD TIMES

Scheidemann Says Future Outlook For Germany Is Bleak

(French Wireless To Reuter)

Paris, June 24.—(Via Lyons and Koukaza).—Herr von Daniels has received from his Government orders to announce to the Allied Governments that the Government of the German Republic is prepared to sign the Peace Treaty as it has been presented to her. The cover has been opened at Les Invalides. The bells were rung and a cannon fired. Many manifestations of joy occurred during the day as soon as the news was known of the submission of Germany.

M. Clemenceau, the Premier, spent a part of Monday afternoon at President Wilson's residence. When he retured to his cabinet M. Clemenceau was apprised at 6:50 p.m. by telephone that the Germans accepted the Treaty of Peace. M. Clemenceau then shook hands with the ministers and his staff, who were at the Hotel de la Rue St. Dominique, saying to them "Ah! Ah! Sirs, I have waited forty-nine years for this minute."

Clemenceau Fires Gun

M. Clemenceau went to the Hotel des Invalides, where he helped to fire the first gun shot in honor of the signature of the Peace Treaty. On his way back to the Ministry of War he was cheered vociferously by the crowd.

The signature of the Treaty of Peace cannot take place before Thursday or Friday, most likely the latter. The German delegation cannot arrive before Wednesday. Then there will be a very close examination of credentials, dealing not only with the conditions of the credentials of the delegates but also with the authenticity of the seals. Furthermore it will be necessary to make a new impression of the preamble of the Treaty of Peace which contains the names of the German delegates and which it is therefore necessary to correct as soon as the exact composition of the new delegation is known.

Meeting Of Ministers

The Cabinet of ministers held a meeting on Tuesday at the Elysee under the presidency of M. Poincare. The Ministers discussed the definite acceptance of the Treaty of Peace by Germany. They congratulated M. Clemenceau, the President of the Council, on the happy ending of the peace negotiations and then proceeded to examine the different political and parliamentary questions which are bound up with the signature of the Treaty.

To Go To Versailles

M. Clemenceau, with President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George are expected on Tuesday afternoon at Versailles, where they will arrive about 2 p.m. They will be received by M. Bitry, the Prefect of Seine-et-Oise, and will visit the Galerie des Galces, where the arrangements for the ceremony of the signature of the Treaty have been completed. The municipality is preparing electric illuminations of public monuments.

Occupation Of Territory Is To Be Continued

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, June 17.—The draft agreement handed to the Germans with the Allied note provides that the Allies shall continue the occupation of German territory as a guarantee of Germany's execution of the Treaty of Peace.

No German troops shall be admitted to the occupied territories but police forces, whose strength shall be determined by the Allies, may be maintained for the purpose of ensuring order.

A civilian body entitled the Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission will be the supreme representative of the Allies in the occupied territory. It will consist of four members representing Belgium, France, Great Britain and the United States.

Sees Hard Times Ahead

Berlin, June 18.—At a meeting of the Peace Committee of the National Assembly at Weimar, Herr Scheidemann stated that a decision with regard to the Peace Treaty could not be made until the complete text of the Allies' reply to the German counter-proposals had been received. He declared Germany was confronted with a most momentous decision which it was their duty to approach with an entirely open mind. Undoubtedly Germany would be faced with very hard times.

The committee adjourned until the 19th to enable the Government to confer with the Peace delegation.

The public generally seems satisfied concerning the conciliatory attitude of the Allies and probably an uninfluenced plebiscite would be overwhelmingly in favor of signing the Treaty of Peace.

New State Denies Guilt

Vienna, June 18.—The German-Austrian delegation has presented a note to the Peace Conference declaring that the German-Austrian Republic created on November 12, 1918, has never been at war with any nation, therefore it should not be made the sole inheritor of the former monarchy's guilt. With regard to the debts and obligations it alleges that German-Austria was the most peace loving of any of the States arising out of the dual monarchy.

British Fleet Prepared

Edinburgh, June 18.—The British fleet is under orders in view of the possibility of the Germans not signing the peace terms. All leave has been stopped, stores and ammunition have been taken on board and the fleet is ready to proceed to sea on the shortest notice. The fleet indeed is again on a war footing.

Delegates Were Defiant

Berlin, June 18.—The Mittag Zeitung declares that the German Peace Delegation on its way from Versailles drafted a memorandum containing its decision that the Treaty should not be signed. The Berliner Tageblatt adds that Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau will resign his present post if the Cabinet does not accept this view.

A message from Weimar states that it is believed the Cabinet will refer the question of signing the Treaty to the various parties, who will decide their attitude separately. If the Majority Socialists decide yes, the Treaty will be signed as they would—with the Centrists, who are wavering and the Independents who are solidly in favor of signing—have a majority in the National Assembly.

Supreme Court Rules On Contract Case

Decision Given In Action By Mow Shing Against A. E. S. Thompson

A decision was given by Sir Havilland de Sausmarez in the British Supreme Court yesterday in the case brought by Mow Shing and Co. against Messrs. A. E. S. Thompson and Co. in respect to a shipment of 70 tons of annealed blue sheets which it was alleged were not delivered in the time specified by contract.

The goods were shipped from mills in Pennsylvania a month after purchase but through the shipping shortage did not arrive here until December after the market had fallen, plaintiffs' claim being that the contract called for shipment within two months.

The court based its decision on the following clause in the contract, "it is further agreed that in the event of the cargo not being shipped within the specified time sellers are open to consider a claim on the Shanghai market value at the time of arrival," and held that it must be construed to mean that the plaintiffs were to take the goods and the defendants were to hold them harmless to the extent of the difference between contract price and market value on arrival. Counsel —Mr. H. P. Wilkinson for the plaintiffs and Mr. E. W. Godfrey for the defendants—agreed to settle the question of damages between themselves or come before the court again. Costs were allowed the plaintiffs.

BRITISH DEMOBOLISATION WILL BE MORE PAPID

Men Streaming Away At Rate Of 40,000 Weekly With More To Go When Peace Is Signed

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 19.—The War Office announces that between the date of the armistice and noon on June 16, 108,644 officers and 2,779,707 men were demobilised or discharged as medically unfit for service. Men are now streaming away at the rate of 40,000 a week and if Peace is signed this number will gradually increase then it will be possible to reduce almost immediately the Rhine army from ten to six divisions and, when there is evidence that Peace is being carried out effectively, this army can be reduced still further.

On the assumption that Peace is signed in June it is still hoped that all men who joined in 1914 and 1915 will be repatriated for release by the end of July, except those serving in India. The release of the latter cannot be dealt with till the autumn.

So far as 300,000 Derby men now serving are concerned, it is hoped to release them according to the month they joined. In the meantime no Derby men who joined for continous service during January, February and March, 1916, will be sent on draft to the East and when the choice within a unit ordered to provide drafts for foreign service lies between men who have been abroad and men who have not, the latter are now invariably chosen. It is also contemplated to exempt from service abroad all men within a few months of thirty-seven years.

RETURNED STUDENTS AIM ATTACK ON PARLIAMENT

Dissolution Of Peking House Is First Of List Of Demands Made

Charging the Peking Parliament with being the great obstacle to internal peace and the members of the Anfu Club with redoubling their illegal and arbitary acts of corruption, a number of local organisations, including the Western Returned Students' Club, the Kiangsu Educational Association, the Chamber of Commerce at Nantao, the Shanghai Overseas Merchants' Club, the Y. M. C. A. and the World Chinese Students' Federation, in a circular telegram yesterday, demanded the immediate dissolution of the Peking Legislature and the re-election of the old Parliament in accordance with law.

Demands Set Forth

The message said in part:

"Since the suspension of the internal peace conference, China has suffered diplomatic defeat and internal chaos. The root of the evil lies with the new Parliament, which has been the perpetual obstacle to union and progress.

"We, the undersigned organisations, have this day met and passed a resolution that the new Parliament should, under no circumstances, continue its illegal existence any more. Although the old parliament in Canton should be re-elected in accordance with the Provisional Constitution, the new Legislature, if it had any sense of honor, should have closed its session long ago and wait for the supreme decision of the people.

New Charges Made

"Contrary to our expectations, the members of the Anfu Club have recently increased their activity in corruption. They have no principles, but merely allow our diplomatic policy to be dictated by their private interests.

"Internally, the club seeks to dictate its anxiety to form a new Cabinet, to control the Bank of China, blackmail enormous sums and fill the important offices with their party members. Even at the expense of the ruin of their country, they would do what they please.

"It is evident that unless the new Parliament is abolished, not only will there be no conclusion of peace, but the destruction of the country is eminent. It is therefore hoped that our fellow-countrymen will join us in our effort to promote genuine democracy and effect the union of the nation."

BARROW COOLIES STRIKE

The wheelbarrow coolies in Chapei went on strike yesterday following the refusal of the rice merchants to increase their pay for the transportation of the cereal. A meeting of the rice merchants was held at the Chinese Chamber of Commerce at which it was decided to increase the wage by 10 percent. It is expected that the coolies will go back to work today.

Swat The Mosquito!

During the past week enough water has fallen and taken up in temporary lodging in and about the settlements to provide brithplaces for more mosquitoes than the fronts of this printing establishment can furnish figures to even faintly indicate.

In connection with the new vital topic of swatting this warm weather pest, Dr. Arthur Stanley, Municipal Health Officer, offers the following timely advice:

No Stagnant Water—No Mosquitoes

Mosquitoes carry Malaria and other diseases.

Mosquitoes cannot multiply except in stagnant water. Where stagnant water cannot be abolished kerosene sprinkled on the surface to form a film will kill mosquito "wrigglers," as it prevents breathing when they come to the surface.

Old tins and bottles, broken crockery and unconsidered articles of this kind capable of holding rain water should be carefully collected from the garden and backyard and placed with the refuse for removal.

Tubs, kongs, water plants, bowerpot saucers or other vessels of water, which cannot be dispensed with should be emptied or sprinkled with kerosene once a week.

Gardeners' kongs, dugouts, wells and water barrels should be done away with, water for the garden, etc., being derived directly from the tap or, if that be impossible, the kongs, etc., should be oiled once a week or kept securely covered so that mosquitoes cannot get to the water to lay their eggs.

Have the water from kennels, chicken coops, etc., regularly emptied out.

Keep drains and rainwater roof channels clean and clear and in good repair. Gully traps that are not frequently flushed should be oiled weekly.

Shallow rain water pools and slushy places can generally be obliterated by a scratch drain or levelled with house ashes, ponds and ditches by filling in and drainage.

Ornamental ponds may be kept free from mosquitoes by fish but, if mosquito "wrigglers" be found, the water should be oiled weekly preparatory to filling in.

A weekly inspection of house and surroundings should be made. It may be remembered that a small unheeded pot of water will suffice to breed enough mosquitoes to irritate a whole neighborhood.

DEMANDS ARE PRESENTED BY MEN FROM SHANTUNG

Acting Premier Finally Sees Delegates Who Oppose Treaty Signing

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 22.—Five representatives of the Shantung Delegation were received yesterday by Mr. Kung Hsin-chan, the Acting Premier, and presented the following demands:

1. The Government should instruct the Chinese Delegation in Paris not to sign the Peace Treaty without reservation regarding Kiaochow and Shantung.

2. The Kaomi-Hsuchow and Shunteh-Tsinan railway agreements should be abrogated. (In this connection it is understood that the Shantung Delegates informed the Acting Premier that they were prepared to find means to assist the Government to redeem the money advanced under the preliminary agreement).

3. The servere punishment of the traitors.

In reply to these demands, Mr. Kung said that the Government had maintained a firm attitude regarding the Kiaochow problem and Great Britain, France and the United States had shown sympathy. If forced to do so, however, by the general tendency of the world, the Government would sign the Peace Treaty but would inform the nation before doing so.

The abrogation of the Kaomi-Hsuchow and Shunteh-Tsinan railway agreements was a matter which concerned Japan, who would have to be approached before any definite answer could be given to this demand.

With regard to the third demand, Mr. Kung said that the punishment of traitors was entirely a matter for the judicial authorities, whose functions must not be interfered with by the Administration.

WILSON AND FRANCE

President Wilson. By Daniel Halevy. Translated from the French by Hugh Stokes. New York: John Lane Company. 1919. 283 pp. G.$1.50.

This is an eminently readable book, written by a Frenchman for French men: on the whole, a successful attempt at interpreting the man and statesman Woodrow Wilson as a product of American past and a factor of American present and future. Admittedly a compilation, the volume has no pretense of deep-cutting research or penetrating analysis; it is, above all, fluently told, with an occasional liveliness of visualisation and style slightly reminiscent of Taine. Of the two main difficulties inherent in his task the author has acquitted himself well. On the one hand, throughout the essay he navigates clear of the shoals of hero-worship, temptation and ruin of many a biographer dealing with subjects much less fascinating. The book has a sober quality which lifts it above mere after-war propaganda literature. On the other hand, in presenting a remote character in a remote milieu to the French public, in many ways the most provincial in Europe just because of its cultural self-sufficiency, he avoids taking too much for granted. His explanations of American institutions and peculiarities are, considering the limitations of space, on the whole, adequate. To be sure, there are slips, but this is only natural. Thus, the author reveals a rather unwarranted optimism when expressing the belief that the election by direct popular vote of the President and of State Governors offers an efficient corrective to the evils of party machinery and bossism. Fortunately he does not mention the Vice-President, at least. He discovers a tendency to elect Presidents from among State Governors—an example of what logicans call hasty induction. He would have hit closer to the mark by ascribing to State Governors a tendency to launch themselves as Presidential possibilities. Furthermore, we read that "the President (Mr. Wilson) is extremely careful not to lose contact with the press. The press is able to manage the people. He desires as much as possible to manage the press. This man, who receives nobody, devotes a special afternoon every week to a journalistic reception." This was evidently written before the days of Mr. Creel. Since then, Mr. David Lawrence has visited France, and M. Halevy thus had an opportunity to have his wrong impression corrected by a first-hand witness. That M. Halevy is unable to clear up the mystery of Mr. Wilson's Mexican policy is not surprising; so is to everybody else. When the author speaks of the potential necessity, on the eve of war, of coercing "ten or twenty millions" of disloyal residents and includes in this number not only Germans and Austrians, but also Irish and Jews, his sweeping inaccuracy becomes irritating. It is to be regretted that the book ends with September, 1917. Somehow a volume on Mr. Wilson, minus the fourteen points, is like a treatise on Luther without reference to the church door of Wittenberg. The translation is good, although the usage of retranslating English terms without checking them up must be discouraged. It results in faux pas, like speaking of the "league to impose peace" or calling Roosevelt's following in 1912 "Progressists." Also, the use of the French term syndicate for railroad brotherhood will be misleading for 95 percent of American readers. Probably many Democrats will object to the translator's employment of the lower case "d" in denoting the Democratic party. Slips of grammer such as "very discredited" will be frowned upon by purists like President Wilson, who, with all his lavish display of the adverb, would never use it with the past participle.

EARLY HENRY JAMES

Travelling Companions. By Henry James. Boni and Liveright. G.$1.75.

From the yelling pages of the Atlantic Monthly, the Galaxy and Scribner's of the early '70s of the last century, there have been selected seven short stories by Henry James and brought together in a volume called "Traveling Companions," from the first tale in the book, and to which Albert Mordell has written a preface, important only for giving the dates and the names of the magazines in which these tales first appeared. In a sense three of the tales thus resurrected have a more intimate relation to The Sun than does most current literature for this reason: "The Sweetheart of M. Briseaux," "Professor Fargo" and "At Isella" originally appeared in the Galaxy, a magazine that was owned and edited by the late Col. William Conant Church and Francis Parcellus Church. As an illustration of editorial taste it is not prejudice that makes this reporter express the opinion that the brothers Church had a finer flair for what was the "best James" than did their editorial rivals of the Atlantic and Scribner's. "Traveling Companions" and "De Gray: A Romance," are pretty poor stuff but two of the three Galaxy tales, "The Sweetheart of M. Briseaux" and "At Isella," are fabrics of fiction and style that clearly foreshadow the writer who was to develop within the next decade into one of the masters of English prose fiction.

To a Henry James fan it is interesting to see how in these tales some of his favorite words already were in use, as "dusky" and his preposterous use of "morsel." Passionate outbursts on the part of his lovers were not encouraged by James and one may note in the confession of a runaway wife in "At Isella" only such a gush of feeling as is matched later in Ralph Touchett's confession to Isabel Archer in The Portrait of a Lady. To those who know James well it will doubtless come as a surprise to see how rapidly he smoothed out the angularities of his descriptions of scenery between the date of these tales and the Roderick Hudson of 1875, The Europeans of 1878, and the Confidence of 1880. Except for M. Briseaux and At Isella, these stories can do nothing for James's reputation: but there can be no question of the fact that his admirers who have never taken the trouble to find the stories in the old magazines will take delight in reading these tales here for the first time.

Mrs. Rinehart's 'Love Stories'

Love Stories. By Mary Roberts Rinehart. George H. Doran Company. G.$1.50.

"Love Stories," Mary Roberts Rinehart's latest volume, is a collection of entertaining romances, chiefly with a hospital atmosphere. Here are revealed Mrs. Rinehart's characteristic points of strength and of weakness, the qualities which have gained for her a very wide popularity and those which keep her work from achieving literary distinction. These stories—which have all seen previous publication in magazines—possess humor, sympathetic understanding of human hearts, an easy, flexible style and a skill in plot structure. They also show a tendency to meet the demand for joyousness to sacrifice the inherent truth of a character or a situation to the happy ending.

But these romances give so much pleasure that it is ungracious to criticise them for not being as good as Mrs. Rinehart's stories could be if she wrote more for the story and less for the audience. They show youth in all sorts of situations. Here, as in "K.," Mrs. Rinehare utilises her practical knowledge of medicine and nursing and makes the scenes and incidents of hospital life interesting. Attractive young nurses in immaculate caps and dresses, pretty young probationers, tremulous with fear lest they be rejected; internes, staff members, orderlies and all the personnel of a hospital, pass through these pages.

There are the patients, of various kinds, tragic young mothers with brooding eyes, girls from the street, small boys, sentimental and wealthy young men. There's the mutinous Jane, whose only complaint is temper and who has retired to a hospital to sulk—only to come into novel and unexpected conflict with a dipsomoniac and a red haired physician and a brand new set of circumstances. There's the resentful young man who nurses his wrath while teetering on the brink of the grave and glowers while he is supposed to be breathing his last. There's Twenty-two, who has an exciting time in quarantine, and Annie Petowski, who defies all regulations concerning times to feed her infant—and others, all worth reading about.

Mrs. Rinehart's stories begin briskly and have the trick of arousing immediate interest. For instance, who wouldn't like to read about persons introduced in these two fashions?

"Having retired to a hospital to sulk, Jane remained there. The family came and sat by her bed uncomfortably, and smoked and finally retreated, with defeat written large all over it, leaving Jane to the continued possession of Room 33, a pink kimono with slippers to match, a hand embroidered face pillow with a rose colored bow on the corner, and a young nurse with the gift of giving Jane daily the appearance of a strawberry and vanilla ice rising from a meringue of bed linen. Jane's complaint was temper."

"Now had Billy Grant really died there would be no story. The story is to relate how he nearly died; and how, approaching that bourne to which no traveller may take anything but his sins—and this with Billy Grant meant considerable luggage—he casts about for some way to prevent the Lindley Grants from getting possession of his worldly goods."

The Technique Of Play-Making

Dramatic Technique. By George Pierce Baker. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company.

It is remarkable, considering the wide interest in the subject, that we have had no really good book on the technique of drama. At one extreme, we have had academic treatises; at the other, such an antiquated theatrical manual as Hennequin's. On the whole, the best book to recommend to a struggling playwright has been William Archer's "Play-Making"; but this leans too far toward philosophical theory to be of much practical value. What we have needed is a book based on wide and scholarly knowledge of both theory and practice, a book showing at once philosophical grasp and an intimate acquaintance with practical details. Such a book Professor Baker has now given us in his long-expected "Dramatic Technique." A lifelong student of drama, who has done more than anyone else in America to vivify its teaching and study, Mr. Baker has had the immense practical advantage of many years' experience in working with and advising young playwrights, and in directing an experimental theater. A better or more thorough equipment for his task could scarcely be imagined.

The author's aim is modest. "This book," he says in his preface, "tries in the light of historical practice merely to distinguish the permanent from the impermanent in technique. It endeavors, by showing the inexperienced dramatist how experienced dramatists have solved problems similar to his own, to shorten a little time of his apprenticeship." He adds: "I wish it distinctly understood that I have not written for the person seeking methods of conducting a course in dramatic technique. I view with some alarm the recent mushroom growth of such courses throughout the country. I gravely doubt the advisability of such courses for undergraduates." The sincerity of these statements is proved by the fact that the book contains no discussion of the one-act play, usually emphasised in college courses; this is reserved for later presentation. Mr. Baker apologises for what may seem the dogmatism of his treatment; but the apology is unnecessary. The book is remarkably free from academic or other dogmatism; it is everywhere tentative and empirical.

What chiefly distinguishes the work from its predecessors is the wide sweep of its induction. The author's question always is: "In what different ways has a given problem been successfully solved?" Every suggestion, every conclusion, is based on a number of definite instances; and these are cited, often at considerable length. One's first impression is that the book is overloaded with illustrative matter; but in fact its chief practical value lies in these carefully selected and thoroughly analysed citations. They require close study and repay it; they vitalise and illuminate the generalisations at every point. No series of directions for preparing a scenario, for instance, would be so likely to help an inexperienced dramatist as the scenarios, complete and incomplete, actually quoted and criticised.

The inclusiveness of Mr. Baker's generalisations may be suggested by a reference to his discussion of "The Essential of Drama" in Chapter II. What is the central requirement of drama? Conflict, answers Brunetiere, speaking for the older theorists. But the practice of modern dramatists has shown that conflict is not always a necessity. Crisis, answers William Archer; but even this is not sufficiently inclusive. Not "action," not even crisis is central in drama; emotion is really the one essential. It is doubtful whether we are justified in calling any story essentially undramatic. The word "dramatic" means, "creative of emotion response." Drama means "the presentation of an individual or group of individuals so as to move an audience to responsive emotion of the kind desired by the dramatist, and to the amount required. This definition includes the "well made play" at one extreme, and the "spice of life" at the other; it includes the Elisabethan tragedy of blood, and the almost actionless plays of the Russians. It will not, we think, be easily bettered.

The most serious defect of the book is an occasional lack of clearness in organisation. Thus, there are four chapters dealing chiefly with plot, all headed "From Subject to Plot": III, Clearing the Way; IV, Clearness through Wise Selection; V, Proportioning the Material; VI, Arrangement for Clearness, Emphasis, Movement. Plainly there is some overlapping here, and the divisions might be made more distinct. Suppose a reader wished to find the discussion of the problem of exposition, for example. He would probably look first in Chapters III and IV; actually, the discussion is divided between V and VI, with further comments in Chapter VIII.

In style, too, the book leaves a good deal to be desired. There are many ungraceful colloquialisms, such as "shaping up his story" (p. 109); and not infrequently sentences so involved and awkward as considerably to embarrass the reader. The following is an extreme instance: "Surely it must now be evident that if a dramatist should in the first place understand perfectly that illustrative action is the core of drama, and must be carefully selected; and secondly that he must, among possible illustrative actions, select those which quickest will produce the largest emotional results; he must also recognise that till he has searched and probed his situations by means of the characters, in the first place he cannot know which are his strongest, and in the second place cannot hope to hold the situations chosen" (p 109). A summary in this form defeats its own end.

Such defects will not seriously interfere with the usefulness of the book. Mr. Baker has the rare distinction of having been a pioneer in two fields; and the faults of his work in both have been the faults of the pioneer. He gave us our first good book on argument; better ones have since been written, but they could not have appeared unless he had shown the way. It is possible that someone else may write a better book on dramatic technique—unless, as we may hope, Mr. Baker should decide to write it himself. But any such book must owe to this one a great part of its merit.

China Political Notes From Chinese Press

As the dispute between Kirin and Fengtien would affect the border defense of the Eastern Provinces, the Cabinet has decided to transfer General Meng En-yuan to the Military College as Chiangchun and appoint General Tien Chung-yu to succeed him. As soon as the emissary from the Presidential Office arrives at some understanding with General Meng, the announcement will be made by a Presidential mandate.

According to a telegram from Tuchun Li Hao-chi of Fukien, he has arrived at some understanding with General Chen Chung-ming whereby they are to concentrate their efforts on the suppression of bandits. He asked that the military expenses of the Province be remitted to him at once.

A $5,000,000 short term loan has been obtained by Messrs. Chow Tse-chi and Hsu Ein-yuan from a number of Tientsin American bankers. The security offered was the land tax of the Chihli Province and of the Metropolitan Area.

The question of the appointment of the new Civil Governor of Kwangtung is hanging fire in Canton. The Kwangsi militarists favor having General Mo Yung-hsin, the Tuchun, hold the office concurrently, while the Kuomintang favors the appointment of Dr. Wu Ting-fang with the separation of the civil and the military administrations.

P. And O. Anticipates Bi-Monthly Sailings Beginning In August

Expected Release Of Commandeered Steamers Will Allow Company To Resume

The release by the British Government of two passenger liners, the Malta and Nagoya, will allow the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company two sailings for Liverpool from Shanghai in August. The Nagoya will leave here on August 17 and the Malta is scheduled to sail from Shanghai on August 31. The local offices of the P. and O. believe that a sufficient number of other steamers now commandeered will be released so that the Company will have bi-monthly sailings for Liverpool beginning in August.

The restriction of Australian passenger traffic on P. and O. liners from Bombay to ports beyond will not affect the local passenger trade as the local offices do not book beyond Bombay on ships of the India line. The Dunera, sailing July 3, and Dilwara, sailing July 18, will take passengers only to Bombay. The restrictions have been in force here for some months, ever since the local offices were notified that all bookings from Bombay to ports beyond had been placed under the direction of the Controller of India.

BRIGADE HAS HARD FIGHT AT EWO GODOWN BLAZE

Firemen Take Hose Along Narrow Passageways Through Smoke And Heat

Fighting through dense clouds of smoke and faced by tremendous heat, firemen took three lines of hose 75 feet along narrow passageways between bales of cotton piled high in the Ewo Cotton Spinning and Weaving Company godown at 46 Yungtszepoo Road attacked a blazing stack of cotton that was aflame clear to the roof and in 20 minutes stemmed a dangerous blaze under very adverse conditions.

The heat, confined by the walls of the reinforced compartment, was such that the firemen were obliged to work in reliefs and the volume of smoke made respirators necessary The members of the department pushed on behind spraying nozzles and made a remarkable fight. The alarm was received at 6:16 o'clock yesterday morning and 20 minutes later the fire was under control.

The firemen experienced difficulty locating the blaze as it was at the Yangtszepoo end of the godown, 75 feet from the main door, which is on the river side.

The burning stack was made up of bales of compressed Indian cotton and when the firemen reached it, flames had spread to loose bales and was working around the whole compartment, which is known as H2. Three streams were played on the pile while another line of hose was run to the roof and after a two-hours' fight no burning cotton remained in the compartment.

To save damage by water and prevent the fire working along the stacks, a quantity of cotton was moved outside.

Some 125 bales of Indian cotton and a number of bales of loose cotton were damaged but it was impossible to estimate the loss last night. The contents of the compartment, H2, were insured for Taels 140,000 and the contents of the entire godown carried Taels 640,000, mainly with companies represented by Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Company, owners of the godown.

ANTI-OPIUM ASSOCIATION HAS MEETING IN PEKING

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, June 23.—It is believed to be considerably due to the activities of the International Anti-Opium Association of China that the clause enforcing upon the world the Anti-opium traffic agreement has been inserted in the text of the League of Nations. This clause binds all the signatories to the treaty to observe the ruling passed at the Hague Convention in 1913 against the opium traffic which was not ratified by certain countries, notably Germany and Turkey at that time. The clause was not embodied in the first draft of the League, and not, it appears, until an urgent request for such action was received by the authorities through a telegram sent to the friends of the Anti-Opium Association in Paris from Peking a few months ago.

At the first full members meeting of the international Anti-Opium Association of Peking since it was formed six months ago, held last Friday night at the Y.M.C.A. here, a letter was read from Sir William Collier, eminent British doctor, to the Rev. A. Sowerby, secretary of the Association, in which he stated that he had received the telegram and had forwarded it to Mr. Lloyd George, whose favorable action on the request could be counted upon.

The meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. had been scheduled for several weeks ago to be held in mass form in the Central Park, but owing to the demonstrations in the city at that time, it was found impossible to hold a public meeting there. The meeting last night was in the form of a getting-together of the Chinese and foreign members to discuss plans for the future and to receive reports as to what the Association has already accomplished during its brief existence.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. Wu Lien-teh, the vice-chairman of the Board of Directors, in the absence of Bishop Norris, the chairman. Speeches were made by Mr. Blanco, Mr. Fei, principal of the school of commerce, Admiral Tsai and others, including Major Wearne, of Reuter's Agency, who was instrumental in forming the International Association.

Mr. Sowerby also reported an interview with the Japanese minister, Mr. Obata, and read a statement in writing which the minister sent the Association, stating the definite intention of the Japanese government to enforce measures to prevent importation of morphine into China. Mr. Obata said in the interview, however, that he was unfamiliar with conditions in Korea which makes this traffic possible.

The plans of the Association include formation of further branches and reports to be presented next year at the international postal congress against the mailing of the drug. A new branch was opened at Shanhaikwan last week by Mr. Sowerby, bringing the total of branches to nearly a dozen. The Tientsin Club which has in charge the organisation of local branches in Chihli has already formed 180 branches which are used chiefly for publicity purposes. The archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in China has recently accepted a directorship of the Association. The President of China and other prominent officials are directors.

Regiments That Cross Stream Destroyed; Traffic In Siberia Reported Improving

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, June 24.—The Siberian army headquarters reports:

The troops under General Kappel have gained a brilliant victory over the Bolshevists, who managed to cross the Belala River. After allowing a few regiments to cross the river, General Kappel proceeded to advance surrounded the Bolshevists and cut them off from their bridgehead, the operation resulting in the destruction of the regiments which had crossed and the capture of many prisoners, guns and machine-guns.

It is reported from Omsk that the Siberian army has linked up its left flank with General Denikin's troops.

Reuter's representative is reliably informed that transport conditions in Siberia are gradually improving. The quantity of cars sanctioned for use in June exceeds the number allotted in May by 772.

Reuter's representative is authoritatively informed that the situation in the Martime Province is very serious. The Bolshevists in some places are operating in groups of 4,000 to 5,000, terrorising the population and forcing the peasants to join the Red Army.

Victory On Sal River

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 18.—A despatch from the British military mission at Ekaterinodar, dated May 27 states that General Ulagaih's victory on the Sal River resulted in the capture in three days' fighting of 3,000 prisoners, 23 guns and many machine-guns, bringing the total captures on this front up to 18,000 prisoners, 83 guns, over 300 machine-guns, and large quantities of war material.

In an army order referring to successes of his troops General Denikin says that he is convinced that the salvation of Russia depends on united supreme authority in conjunction with a single supreme commander and therefore acknowledges Admiral Koltchak as the supreme commander of the Russian armies and places himself under his orders.

Roosevelt Trophies Publicly Exhibited

Letters From Ex-Kaiser And Specimens Of Big Game Are Shown

New York, May 15.—Letters from the former Kaiser and other rulers and statesmen to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, as well as hundreds of his trophies from all parts of the world, were placed on exhibition in Avery Hall at Columbia University last night under the auspices of Columbia House. The exhibition is to remain open for a month as part of the campaign on Americanisation.

Those who were present at the opening of the exhibit last night were persons who had been friends of Colonel Roosevelt for years, and many of them had known him since he was police commissioner in this city. The first view of the exhibit was limited to these friends, who had received special invitations to attend the opening. Colonel Roosevelt was eulogised by Hamlin Garland in an address.

The exhibits may be divided roughly into four sections, although none are placed in categories. One section comprises letters written to Colonel Roosevelt by persons in all stations of life, from emperors to patrolmen on the city police force, and by his children. In another section are trophies of his hunting trips in the Rocky Mountains, in Africa and in South America. A third group takes in several portraits and busts of the ex-President, and a fourth shows some of his manuscripts and some of the editions of his literary works.

The big game trophy section of the exhibit was arranged by Carl Akeley, the hunter and explorer who accompanied Colonel Roosevelt on his African expedition, and most of the heads and pelts were taken from the trophy room in the mansion at Oyster Bay.

The art collection includes practically all of the famous portraits of Colonel Roosevelt, as well as etchings and bronzes. One portrait is that of Melcher, showing Colonel Roosevelt in his hunting suit. In the literary section under the direction of Colonel J. B. Bishop, who was Colonel Roosevelt's literary executor, is a collection of scores of letters and manuscripts. Some of them were received by Colonel Roosevelt, and many others were written by him and now are put on view by courtesy of the recipients.

Some of the letters from rulers in all parts of the world refer to the success of the tour around the world of the American battle fleet. One of these, written in 1908 by Wilhelm Hohenzollern, then Kaiser, complimented the nation upon the tour of the squadron, and expressed the hope that the two nations would continue to develop their friendly relations, because, he said, they had so much in common. Kaiser Wilhelm also inclosed some snapshots of his family, including one of the son who was then Crown Prince.

There is a letter from the former Tsar of Russia in English and one by the Emperor of Japan. One of the letters of King Edward speaks of the solidarity of the English-speaking races throughout the world, and concludes: "I entirely agree with you that the interests of the English-speaking peoples are alike in the Atlantic and Pacific, and I look forward with confidence to the co operation of the English-speaking races becoming a most powerful civilising factor in the progress of the world."

Many letters in a long correspondence with John Hay are shown, one by Mr. Hay being written just before the inauguration of Colonel Roosevelt and inclosing a lock of hair from the head of Abrahan Lincoln. Mr. Hay expressed the hope that the new president would wear the lock of the martyr president during his term of office.

Nicholas Murray Burtler, President of Columbia, has contributed the notes taken in a conference with David Jayne Hill, Albert Shaw, Dr Butler, and others upon the Hay Pauncefote treaty. Miscellaneous relics include Colonel Roosevelt's ranching and cowboy apparel, his rifles and many other trophies.

STATUS OF GERMAN DYES

The local offices of the National Aniline and Chemical Company have received cable advices which indicate that the Farbenfabriken vorm. F. Bayer and Company's output during the war was only five percent of the pre-war production and that since the actual cessation of hostilities it has increased to but ten percent with very little chance for additional increase for many months to come.

The firm before the war was the foremost exporter of aniline dyes in Germany.

Banking Service with AMERICA—direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Share MarketReport

Messrs. Maitland and Fearon write as follows in their exchange circular for week ending June 25:

Exchange.—The London price of silver after dropping 1¼d. to 53¾d. has today recovered to 54⅛d., but is still ⅜d. lower than last week's closing price. The silver markets appear unsteady, the sudden movements reported, indicating the return of a speculative element which has been in abeyance during the war. It is doubtful whether silver can maintain its present comparatively high gold price, unless a general readjustment of the leading currencies of the world based on a gold standard is to be undertaken.

Our local exchange market at 5s. 3¼d. (T.T. on London) is 1d. lower than last week, the market remaining firm for early, say to July 15, and weak after August.

The local stock of sycee and bar silver at Tls. 22,166,000 is about Tls. 600,000 lower than last week. The stock of Chinese and Mexican dollars at $14,090,000 is about $1,400,000 up.

LONDON SPEAKERS TELL NEEDS FOR PREFERENCE

Addresses On Subject Given By Lieut.-Col. Amery And Mr. W. M. Hughes

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 18.—At a luncheon given at the London Commercial Club, Lieut.-Colonel Amery said Imperial Preference meant the country would recognise in peace, as it had learnt to recognise in war, that the British Empire was a reality. They could not afford in commerce, any more than in war, to treat the nations living under the British flag as as if that flag had no meaning.

Under the existing system England dissipated an enormous amount of economic strength which might have been conserved within the Empire and help them in time of need. He believed that if the British Empire were broken up it would mean the final end of any hope of an organised League of Nations. The more the Empire was effectively united, the greater would be its contribution towards the maintenance of the peace of the world.

Hughes Would Have Policy Clearly Defined

London, June 18.—At a luncheon given by the Empire Producers' Organisation in London today, Lord Milner presiding, Mr. W. M. Hughes, the guest of honor, urged that the economic policy of Great Britain should now be more clearly declared. Imperial Preference might be the beginning of great things but of itself it was meaningless and would not turn the scale by a fraction of a hair's breadth in the manufactures of Great Britain.

Failing a definite policy, it was certain Germany would comparatively soon regain her hold on the resources of the Empire and the world, and the war would have been fought almost in vain. The Empire could be made a place worthy of the men who had saved it and the working classes' just demands for better conditions could be satisfied only by a policy which would ensure the development of the Empire's great resources for trade, for its shipping and the control of its own markets.

Unless a definite policy was adopted giving British manufacturers preference in the home market and giving the Dominions a larger market within the Empire for their raw materials, not only would Imperial trade suffer but the Empire would tend to disintegrate.

YI SHIH PAO EDITOR TO ASK NEW HEARING

Effort Set On Foot To Obtain Further Consideration Of Case In Peking

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, June 23.—The case of Editor Pang of the Yi Shih Pao, who was sentenced yesterday to serve a term of one year's imprisonment, and that of his printer and a distributor who were sentenced to serve two months apiece will be investigated and appealed in some way by his friends in Peking. Mr. Tu, the managing editor of the paper, who was away from Peking at the time of the closing of the paper six weeks ago and who is now staying at the Wagon-lits Hotel in the Legation Quarter, says that in the present disordered state of the administration in Peking it will be difficult to get an appeal through the proper channels within the ten-day period allowed. The matter may therefore be brought direct to the attention of the highest authorities.

BRITAIN NEEDS HOUSES IN RECONSTRUCTION TASK

Minister In Leeds Speech Says Lack Of Labor Is Hampering Government

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 18.—Speaking at Leeds, Mr. Christopher Addison, Minister of Reconstruction, said he wanted 100,000 houses during the remainder of 1919 and 200,000 in 1920. The limiting factor was labor but the Government was negotiating with a view to augmenting and making better use of labor as was done in the production of munitions.

Trading With Germany Left Up To Nations

SHANGHAI, JUNE 26, 1919

Is The Press To Be Muzzled In Shanghai?

IN the Municipal Gazette which is issued today the Municipal Council announces its intention to propose to the ratepayers and the Consular Body an amendment to the Settlement by-laws providing that all newspapers in the Settlement, foreign as well as Chinese, must be licensed by the Council. Further this amendment provides that the Council may attach such conditions and make such regulations for the issuance of such licenses as it sees fit. Also—as the Council explains in its announcement—"That the Council should have full power of immediate action, without recourse to any other authority, to prevent the publication of any printed matter calculated to incite to a breach of peace." The Council, of course, being judge as to what constitutes incitation to breach of peace—police, prosecutor, judge and jury. In other words, newspapers shall exist in this Settlement only on sufferance of whatever men happen to make up the Municipal Council and there shall be freedom of the press only insofar as the press does not disagree with the Municipal Council.

This is not the first time the Council has proposed such a regulation. Every other time ratification has been refused; refused because such a law is repugnant to every Anglo-Saxon instinct of fairness, because freedom of speech and freedom of the press are the cardinal rights of free men. The Council's reason for renewing its effort to get this regulation passed is given as the experience gained from the recent students' strike. That strike, it says, showed the need of vesting the Council with the power, "without recourse to any other authority, to prevent the publication of any printed matter of a character calculated to incite to a breach of the peace."

Now, just what does that mean? The Chinese press and Chinese circulars issued in times of excitement? No, because there are already means of dealing with them. The Mixed Court records show numerous cases of newspapers fined and editors punished for incitation. In this same issue of the Municipal Gazette is the record of the editor of the Ming Kuo Pao being tried and cautioned for such an offense and three other men being fined and imprisoned for the publication of a certain book. It is not the Chinese press that is aimed at, then, but the foreign press. And wherein did the strike show any need of curbing the foreign papers? Well, THE CHINA PRESS did have the temerity to criticise the way in which the municipal authorities handled the strike, as everybody else did. In any similar occurrence in the future, then, the Council would have the power not only to punish THE CHINA PRESS for such criticism, but to send to its office each night and tell it what it might publish the next day. And without recourse to any other authority! Without even the indorsement of its own consul.

Well, other papers may do as they like, but this paper gives notice that it will fight with every ounce of its strength and to the highest authority in Washington, if necessary, to prevent the affixation of such a gag. It will do so because it is an American paper published in Shanghai under American laws and not a German paper published in Prussia under the Hohenzollerns, and because the American community of this Settlement has the inalienable right, so long as there is extra-territoriality, to be represented by a free press.

The Brain Vs. Hand

Widespread Manifestation We Are Living In An Age Of Machinery

The great war has emphasised the value of machinery in all the industries; in fact, we live in an age of machinery. Yet less than 100 years ago men were opposing the introduction of machinery upon principle. The human hand is still the most wonderful and adaptable machine. But compare the results of the old labor and the new.

A hand brickmaker, assisted by four or five helpers, can mold about 500 bricks an hour. By hard and continuous work through a season of twenty weeks this man would pile up to his credit 500,000 bricks. This record is, however, easily beaten by a brick-making machine, which, even fifty years ago, could press 1,500 bricks an hour.

The best files are still made by hand; but a great many machine-made files are passed off as hand made. The manual worker toilfully and patiently cuts each line of the file with hammer and chisel.

Figures show that in ten working hours an industrious file-cutter delivered 46,000 blows, the majority of them with a hammer weighing seven and a half pounds, so that his total effort for the day was equivalent to moving 142 tons the distance of one hammer's stroke.

The file-cutting machine delivers its powerful cuts almost as rapidly as a sewing machine thrusts its needle up and down—that is, at the rate of 1,000 or more strokes a minute. All manner of nice adjustments can be made to suit the character of the file in the machine. The results has been a great cheapening of the ordinary kinds of files. One of the very earliest successful machines reduced the cost of a file to about one-eighth of that of the earlier handmade ones.

Spinning by hand is now scarcely known. The Australian aborigines twist thread with the finger and thumb as a shoemaker sometimes twists twine.

A certain Norfolk lady named Pringle spun a pound of wool into 84,000 yards of thread, or nearly 48 miles. But this performance was far excelled by that of Miss Ives of Spalding, who spun, we are told, the same weight of wool into 168,000 yards, or 95½ miles of yarn. These results are very exceptional. Ordinary spinners produced only from 13,000 to 40,000 yards a pound.

The latter results are well within the capacity of modern spinning machines. A medium count of cotton yarn contains, let us say, forty hanks to the pound, a hank being 840 yards. This gives us 33,600 yards to the pound.

But the great gain of the modern machine results from its multiplied efforts and its speed. Twelve hundred spindles or more are at work at once, and each is spinning and winding five or six feet of thread four times a minute, while a man and two boys will be sufficient to attend to the machine.

Envelopes were at first made by hand, but machinery was soon adapted to the work. The first of these was a cutter, which cut out a pile of blank shapes at one operation. These blanks were folded and gummed by hand, the folder using a sort of bone knife. A skillful workman could turn out about 3,000 envelopes a day.

In a comparatively short time, however, a machine was perfected which not only folded and gummed the envelopes but embossed, pressed, counted, and stacked them, and its output was about 3,000 an hour.

At every turn we see the hands and the brain pitted against each other, and the brain is ever taking work from the hands, to the advantage of the world.—Baltimore Sun.

Three Bows From Swatow

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

GREETINGS

With our heartfelt gratitude to our most friendly and kind Editor: I am residing in Swatow on account of business and have perused carefully the leading articles of your esteemed paper, entitled "The Salvation of China by Students" and "The Tufei Tuchun." We, Chinese citizens, are gratified to our innermost selves when we read them. For the information of the educationalists and merchants in the Southwest, I had caused them to be reproduced in the form of 100,000 handbills together with the Japanese handbills in order that they may be able to differentiate the kindness of our friends and the aggrandising spirit of our criminal neighbor. I herewith enclose one of these handbills for your perusal, and to wish your esteemed paper 10,000 years, the great editor 10,000 years and all other members of the editorial staff of THE CHINA PRESS 10,000 years of happiness and prosperity.

With three bows from,

Golf Democratic Game Of Ancients

Whether it was a Roman with his "paganica," a ball of leather stuffed with feathers, or a Scotsman who first mastered the magic of golf, is for the learned to determine, writes Thornton Hall in The Scottish-American. The writer continues:

Naturally, we who are not learned, would scoff at the "paganica," and award the palm to our "brither Scot," who beyond any doubt was so infatuated with the "sma' ba'" in the far-away days before Flodden was fought, that it became necessary to forbid "golfe or uther sik unprofitabill sportes" north of the Tweed, "under the pain of fourtle shillings!" because, forsooth, they interfered far too much with the more important practice of archery, at which their English neighbors were too proficient for them to be quite comfortable.

And it was not until gunpowder superseded bow and arrow that the Scotsman could indulge his love of his favorite game to his heart's content, without fear of the law. Even then, that the game was not always a safe one to play is proved by the fact that some youths who were indiscreet enough to play at the "gowf" one Sunday afternoon were hailed before the session, and their ringleader was ordered to pay a mark to the poor and "to compear the next Sabbath, into the place of public repentance, in presence of the whole congregation."

A Royal Devotee

But apart from this not unreasonable restriction, the game flourished greatly from the dawn of the 17th century, and had no keener patron than the sovereign himself and the nobles of his court. In 1603 we find James VI. of Scotland (and I. of England), who was no mean golfer himself, appointing by a letter from Holyrood House, one William Mayne, burgess of Edinburgh, to be club-maker to his Highness; and a little later, granting James Melvill and others a monopoly of the making of golf balls, the price of which was fixed at four shillings (Scots) each, for the space of 21 years. Thus, more than three centuries ago, we find golf firmly established in Scotland under the brightest of auspices.

Of James' eldest son, Henry, who inherited in full measure his father's love of the royal pastime, the following story is told by an eyewitness of the scene: "At another time, playing at golf, a play not unlike Pallmaille, whilst his schoolmaster stood taking with another, and marked not his Highness warning him to stand further off, the prince, thinking he had gone aside, lifted up his golf club to strike the ball. Meantime one standing by said to him, 'Beware that you hit not Master Newton,' wherewith he, drawing back his hand, said, 'Had I done so, I had but paid my debts.'"

The first Charles was never gayer or happier than when he was chasing the "wee ba'" over the famous links of Leith with his courtiers; and it is said, it was while thus employed one day in 1641 that a courtier, arriving hot-foot on the scene, placed in his hands a letter giving news of Sir Phelim O'Neale's rising in Ireland. On reading the letter, we are told, his majesty called for his coach, and leaning on one of his attendants and in great agitation, drove to Holyrood House.

It was, however, under James, Duke of York (afterwards James II.), that golf basked most in royal favor in Scotland. In the years 1681 and 1682, when the duke was commissioner to parliament, held his court at Holyrood House, there were few days when he did not make at least one round of the links, and his enthusiasm so infected his court that "at the palace the talk was all of golf from morning to night."

"I remember," says William Tytler, of Woodhouselee, "in my youth to have conversed with an old man named Andrew Dickson, a golf-club maker, who said that when a boy he used to carry the duke's golf clubs and to run before him and announce where the balls fell; thus performing for his royal highness the duties of a forecaddie.

It was at this time that the Duke of York took part in a very memorable match, of which the following story is told:

Duke And Cobbler

Two Englishmen of his suite were one day debating with the duke as to whether Englishmen or Scotsmen were the better players of golf, when his highness promptly challenged them to put the question to a test by playing against him and a Scotsman of his choice for a considerable wager. The duke chose for his companion one John Patersone, a shoemaker, who was reputed to be the best player in Scotland. The match was played, and as might have been expected, since the Englishmen were but indifferent players, the Scottish players scored an easy victory.

So elated was James with the result, which added vastly to his popularity, that he shared the stakes with the cobbler, who "immediately built himself a comfortable house in the Canongate, upon the wall of which the duke caused an escutcheon to be affixed bearing the arms of the Patersone, surmounted by the Patersone crest and motto."

It was on the same links of Leith that the Hon. Alexander Elphinstone played his memorable "solemn match at golf" for 20 guineas with Captain Porteous; with the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Morton and a "vast mob of the great and little besides" as spectators.

Here, a few years later, was fought the deadly duel between Elphinstone and Lieut. Swift, in which the latter was mortally wounded; and it was on the Leith links that Duncan Forbes, lord president of the court of session in Scotland—"great Forbes, patron of the just"—played many a time when the links were covered with snow—such was his passion for the game.

But to recount the names of famous men who have played on these historic links would be to catalogue most of Scotland's greatest sons (to say nothing of the distinguished stranger), from the Earl of Bothwell to A. J. Balfour, and from Patersone, the finest player of Stuart days, to Allan Robertson, the greatest golfer of all time, Tom Morris, and the professional giants of more recent days.

Nor must we forget Alexander McKellar, "the Cock o' the Green," who literally spent his life on the links, playing by himself when he could not get an opponent, and even industriously practising "sort holes" by lamplight. Of Alexander it is recorded that, when one night his guid wife, who hated golf as much as he loved it, appeared on the links with his supper and glass of toddy, he good-humoredly told her that she "could wait if she likit till the game was dune, but at present he had no time for refreshment."

Scots Prowess

And what amazing feats these old time Scottish golfers performed—and thought nothing of them, too! More than a century ago (it was in 1798) wagers were made that no two members of the Burgess Golfing Society could drive a ball over the spire of St. Giles steeple, which rises 161 feet in the air. Mr. Scoales, of Leith, and a printer named Smellie, were the chosen champions, each being allowed six balls. Taking their station at the southeast corner of the Parliament Square, both champions performed the feat with ease, the balls flying a good score of feet over the weathercock.

For another wager, Donald M'Lean, writer to the Signet, drove a ball not very many years ago over Melville's monument in St. Andrew's Square; and did not a doughty golfer called Topham, once—as long ago as 1775—achieve the remarkable performance of driving a ball to the top of Arthur's Seat?

Such are but a few incidents from the romantic chapter of Scottish golf, which is being added to every year by the present-day champions; not one of them, however, could, we fancy, approach Allan Robertson's amazing performances on the St. Andrew's links, which are thus chronicled: "At various times Allan holed the St. Andrew's links at the following numbers, electing his best holes: Going out—No. 1 in 3 strokes; 2 in 3; 3 in 3; 4 in 3; 5 in 4; 6 in 4; 7 in 3; 8 in 1; 9 in 3—total 27. Coming in—10 in 3; 11 in 2; 12 in 3; 13 in 4; 14 in 4; 15 in 3; 16 in 3; 17 in 4; 18 in 3—total 29. Number of strokes for the full round, 56! How amazing these figures are none would more readily admit than such champion golfers as James Braid, J. H. Taylor and Harry Vardon.

Movies For Far East

Los Angeles, May 10.—With the ending of the war a drive is being conducted from this city by motion picture producers with the idea of opening a market for American-made films in the Orient and the Antipodes. It is estimated that 5,000 miles of smiles and tears in film form will leave Los Angeles during the latter part of 1919 and the first part of 1920 for Oriental markets as well as markets south of the equator.

A recent film survey made for the benefit of picture magnates showed that the pictures of Mary Pickford are in especial demand in Australia, New Zealand and Japan. The antics of Douglas Fairbanks and the capers of Charlie Chaplin are of great interest to the Chinese, who in the interior view the pictures in open-air theaters after dark. In New Zealand, where the native Moaris are partial to Mary Pickford, the audience watch the little star by standing on their chairs as men frequently do at prize fights in this country and when little Mary appears to be in danger they shout advice to her. Because of the many dialects of the natives it is impossible to translate the sub-titles and the natives are able to interpret the plays through the language of the eye only.

What Is London's Lure?

(London Daily Mail)

What is it about London that exercises such a fascination not only over its residents but also over visitors from all quarters of the globe?

It cannot be its beauty, for there are many other cities more beautiful, greener, and architecturally superior; besides, such things attract only the curious or interested minority. It cannot be its mere size, for that in itself would not fascinate. It cannot be its luxury and wealth, for I know people to whom such things are but hearsay who confess to this mysterious longing for London. It cannot be its lights and life, for there are thousands of its residents who have clung to London from choice when the moon was a danger and London life was very sad.

It cannot be its museums, for the Londoner leaves them to tourists; nor its educational facilities, for they are no more than those of any other city in proportion to its size. It certainly cannot be for its healthiness, for that is a minus quality. It is not even its business opportunities, for by far the greatest proportion of London's residents are those who can just manage to "rub along" and no more.

Yet I know Scotsmen without number, and some Irishmen, who, having gravitated to London, now say they never feel happy away from it. I know many Americans who declare that after a taste of London they could never settle in any other country, and others, who, while they cannot reside here permanently, find annual excuses for trips to London merely "to be here again."

I know of Australians whose fighting fitness brought them to England who either have succumbed to the lure of London and are taking up business interests here or have declared that they will never rest in their native land until they have come back to visit London again. One Anzac, referring to his Gallipoli experiences, told me "it was worth it all to see London!"

Then I know country folk, women born in London and settled through marriage in distant villages, who would give all they have to be back within sound of Bow Bells.

What, then, is this fascination that keeps Londoners faithful to their city love, that drags the exile ever back, and transforms visitors from other countries into devoted admirers?

Is it that London is one vast panorama of constant change, and that within it lies an inexhaustible store of interest, excitement, and appeal, varying with every moment of the day and night, and satisfying all?

But that might equally be said of Paris or of New York. What, then, is the particular lure of London?

Why It Is 'Maru'?

According to M. Homiharo, Japanese Consul in San Francisco, the word "maru," which forms a part of the names of Japanese merchant vessels, is as unexplainable as the American term "jitney."

This is what Homiharo writes to Deputy Naval Officer E. W. Maslin in answer to a request for an explanation of the meaning of the word:

"It would seem that the answer should be very simple to a native Japanese, but as a matter of fact your answer should properly come from the antiquarians and the scholars.

"You will find by consulting the Japanese dictionary that the word 'maru' is defined thus:

"Maru a circle, full, complete, whole, all. Example: It is a full year since I came to Tokio. (Tokio ni kite maru ichinen ni naru.)

"The world originally came from a Chinese character which has a pronunciation of its own in the Chinese tongue, but which stood for anything which is round or circular. When young Japan wishes to indulge in slang he will sometimes take advantage of this fact by referring to the dollar piece as a maru. The word has the properties of both the noun and the adjective, with something of the adverb thrown in for good measure. Just how it came into use as a part of the nomenclature of ships I cannot explain. It is one of those things which apparently grew into use without recognised parentage like your recent world jitney. It is as hard to account for as the use of the dollar sign ($) in the United States or the practice of putting quotation marks around the names of ships, newspapers, etc.

"I regret that I cannot be more precise in answering your very natural question, but the task really belongs to the scholars. I can only point to the accomplished fact that the word 'maru' is now being employed to distinguish merchant ships from war vessels and other craft, and it seems to hold its own in that connection without regard to etymology, prosody or syntax."

Enter The Super-Maid-Of-All-Work

For Those Who Can Afford To Pay High Wages A 'Household Assistant' May Solve The Servant Problem

(New York Times)

Something must be done about the servant problem. Everybody has known that a long time.

The most cheering news on the subject, at least for such well-to-do persons as can pay high wages, is found in the evolution of the "household assistant"—a sort of super-maid-of-all-work. An organised committee of the United States Employment Service, Central Branch of the Y. W. C. A., the Municipal League, the Consumers' League, the City Club, and Teachers' College is among the associations now working on the problem.

There are no servants, or, to be more accurate, the supply is less than the demand by thousands. There is a certainty that no immigrants are now landing as recruits for household service, and the possibility that few if any will land in the near future. In short, the problem confronting the householders of America is: "Shall we do our own housework and chores or shall we adjust ourselves to conditions that will attract a higher class assistant?" It looks, indeed, as if the latter course were the preferable one for women who can afford it.

As a first step toward reorganisation in the household industry it is proposed that the worker in the home shall be not a servant at all, but a trained household assistant—one who knows the principles and the working details of every branch of housework. In other words, the new kind of houseworker will be chosen for her expert knowledge of the situation she is to assist in handling. She will be, as far as working capacity is concerned, what the mistress herself is, and she will consider herself privileged to help in all branches of the new business.

In order to effect this mighty change, many and various readjustments are necessary, and a vast amount of education must be done not only among the workers, but among the housewives themselves. The girl who is the ordinary servant, accustomed to years of menial servitude, would have no conception of handling her job on this new basis, and it would be, in most cases, impractical to try to teach her the new standards. The only hope is to induce women and girls of higher class and standing to undertake the work and to elevate it by their ideals. So far, a number of women have taken up the new profession who in years gone by would not have dreamed of such a path as the goal of their energies. They are women who were employed in Government work and in war factories and were turned out of work more or less suddenly when the emergency necessity for their services was at an end. They learned in wartime that it was good to work, for they filled a gap in their own household expenses which was too good to let go all of a sudden. But they were accustomed to business ways and business hours and business privileges and they demanded as their right these same conditions when it came to the filling of the new kind of job. The conditions, then, are something like this:

An eight-hour day they claim as their right, if they are to give efficient, trained, high-class service. So the new household assistant gets her eight-hour day, exclusive of the rest period. She may come, to be sure, at any time; but when her eight hours are up she is free. She lives at home and she pays for her own breakfast, luncheon, or dinner, just as any other clerical worker would do in an office or in a factory. The housewife who employs such an aid is competing with the merchant or the manufacturer in the conditions he gives his laborers.

The salary for a trained home assistant ranges from $12 to $15 a week, although the conditions must necessarily vary according to the business customs in distinct local ties. The following terms, it is prophesied, will be prevalent in and around New York: The trained assistant will have one whole day and also half a day a week to herself, just as her sisters have in business offices. All legal holidays or their equivalents are her own time, and she will get two weeks' vacation with full pay after she has given to her employer a year of her service.

They are good conditions; surely they could not be much better from the worker's point of view. But how about the employer's point of view? Well, it is not nearly so bad as would appear on casual consideration.

The big argument in favor of the dawning condition of household affairs in the eyes of the housekeeper is that from more efficient labor come more satisfactory results. This fact has been proved in offices, about which, to be sure, the housewife knows little or nothing. Some years ago it was thought good business to employ in offices more or less inefficient women to do the clerical jobs. In how many offices is this condition found today? In a small and constantly decreasing number. Employers have learned that if they give fair conditions to their workers, and demand trained service, their business prospers with more speed than it did in the old days. Why, it is asked by the advocates of the new order, won't the same rule apply to women and their household affairs?

Upon the householder under the new scheme evolves the responsibility of managing and directing the situation in a forceful way. It is executive work, but once it has been mastered it runs like clockwork and leaves the executive much time to call her own or to devote to other duties. She it is who must see that each of her employes understands her position thoroughly and accepts its conditions. She must do the planning in a large way and then forget the details. In other words, she must constantly hold the reins of her business as her husband does of his.

Here are some working schedules for household assistants, compiled by those having experience in the work:

One assistant:

First Plan—1 to 11 and 12 to 4. Covering breakfast, luncheon, and four or five hours of general housework.

Second Plan. (Alternative)—11 to 3 and 4 to 8. Covering luncheon and dinner, and about four hours of general household work.

Two assistants:

First Assistant—7 to 11 and 12 to 4.

Second Assistant—11 to 3 and 4 to 8. Covering all three meals and about ten hours of household work.

Two full time and one half time assistants:

First Assistant—7 to 11 and 12 to 4.

Second Assistant—11 to 3 and 4 to 8.

Third Assistant (Half Time)—5 to 9. Covering three meals and about fourteen hours of general housework, and allowing the services of two assistants through luncheon and dinner.

An overworked assistant, the victim of long hours and too strenuous confinement, can be of as little satisfaction about a house as in any other type of business. But one subject to the above conditions can preserve her health and strength and use her abilities for the good of her employer.

The girls are supposed, under this arrangement, to do all sorts and conditions of household service except heavy washing, but they are not asked to stay at cooking until their senses reel or confine their energies only to waiting upon table. They can help with everything from the care of the children to the marketing and sewing, and even, if they can prove their abilities, to the writing of some of the household's business letters.

Now, from the girl's point of view, there are still other matters to be considered. It is hard at first for a young woman who has contemplated office work as her "career" to see that the new profession of household assistant holds any great opportunity. She has seen the poor servant all her life, and she does not wish to step into her shoes by the widest stretch of the imagination. Still, if she is the right type, if she loves the things of a home and the recognised housewifely duties, she will find in the work much which will interest her.

There is this to be realised, that women are pouring into offices at a much greater rate than they are actually needed; that highly trained women are demanding such positions of authority as it is possible for them to obtain, and that little office helpers stand a poor show of getting ahead at any rapid rate, whereas in the new household field the opportunities are only just beginning to present themselves, and those who undertake the work at the beginning will stand great chances of working their way into larger expressions of this same occupation. There is chance as their training increases for them to become managers of whole households of servants—working housekeepers—in the homes of the well-to-do. They can develop, possibly, into experts who go out and establish well-running houses. Indeed, there is no telling how much, as time advances, they might be able to accomplish. The field lies open, unplowed, for them to develop. Many years ago no one except those of the most far-reaching vision sensed the fact that women would be the power in offices that they are today. They have created their places for themselves. It remains for the workers in the new household service to do the same.

Those who are engaged in studying the future of domestic service say it must be remembered that, when everything is figured down to the minutest detail, the household assistant under the new rules is not saving as much money as she did under the old regime. She buys all of her own food, she provides her own lodging—all of which takes much of what she earns. But she is a higher type of woman, and she prefers her freedom and her standards of work to the extra keep and tips which she might collect in the old way. She is buying her freedom herself, and the housewife, when she figures the cost, will find that while she seems to be paying a great deal more in wages, she is really getting more for her money.

The Y. W. C. A., in its central employment bureau, is getting places for all of the household workers it can find. The demand far exceeds the supply at present, but that is largely due to the fact that it has so few household assistants whom the agency can guarantee to be successful under the new rules. It is proposed to meet the deficiency by establishing a series of Summer classes which will train the girls for this sort of service.

TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIERS ARE GREETED IN LONDON

Great Ovation Is Given By Throngs Lining Streets From Station

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 18.—Enormous crowds and very enthusiastic scenes marked the arrival in the Metropolis of the Atlantic fliers.

Great precautions were taken to prevent a repetition of the Hawker-Grieve experiences.

The Mayor and Mayoress at St. Pancras attended at the station and the fliers were accorded a civic reception.

Representatives of the Aero Club attended and also General Groves, representing Major-General J. E. Seely and Major-General Sir H. M. Trenchard, of the Air Ministry, who handed the fliers letters of congratulation from both.

The streets along the route to the Aero Club were again densely thronged and the people gave the airmen gigantic ovations. Two aeroplanes flew over the streets along the route, escorting the airmen's motor-car. Lieut. Harry Hawker, Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith and a number of the chief officers of the Air Board were present at the reception at the Aero Club.

Is 'All British' Triumph

London, June 16.—The papers are jubilant over the triumphant all-British flight which achieved the conquest of the Atlantic.

An amazing feature of the flight was the wonderful accuracy in maintaining the course, but the papers emphasise that the flights at present are primarily feats of human endurance and must not be taken as foreshadowing the early establishment of a trans-Atlantic passenger service. In this connection greater hopes are entertained for the coming flight of the Dirigible R-34.

The Vickers-Vimy biplane brought 800 letters.

Lieut. Brown was only able to take four readings of their position; one from the sun, one from the moon, one from the Polar star and one from the star Vega.

To Lunch With King

London, June 19.—Captain Alcock and Lieut. Brown, at his Majesty's command, are lunching at Windsor Castle on the 21st.
